Life and Travel on the Nile.

SIOUT, UPPER EGYPT, Nov. 27, 1851.

—"The life thou seek'st Thou'll find beside it' Eternal Nile."
—[Moore's Alciphron.

The Nile is the Paradise of Travel. I thought I had already fathomed all the depths of enjoyment which the traveler's restless life could reach—enjoyment more varied and exciting, but far less serene and enduring than that of a quiet home—but here I have reached a fountain too pure and powerful to be exhausted. I never before experienced such a thorough deliverance from all the petty annoyances of travel in other lands, such perfect contentment of spirit, such entire abandonment to the best influences of nature.—Every day opens with a jubilate, and closes with a thanksgiving. If such a balm and blessing as this life has been to me, thus far, can be felt twice in one's existence, there must be another Nile somewhere in the world.

Other travelers undoubtedly make other experiences and take away other impressions. I only speak on behalf of the two contented inmates of the Cleopatra, though I am sure that an American who has just arrived and anchored his boat beside ours would accept our decision as his own. I can even conceive circumstances which would almost destroy the pleasure of the journey. The same exquisitely sensitive temperament which in our case has not been disturbed by a single untoward incident, might easily be kept in a state constant derangement by an unsympathetic companion, a cheating dragoman, or a heedless crew. There are also many trifling désagrémens, inseparable from life in Egypt, which some would consider a source of annoyance; but as we find fewer than we were prepared to meet, we are not troubled thereby. Our enjoyment springs from causes so few and simple, that I scarcely know how to make them suffice for the effect, to those who have never visited the Nile. It may be interesting to such to be made acquainted with our manner of living, in detail.

In the first place, we are as independent of all organized Governments as a ship on the open sea. (The Arabs call the Nile Elbahr, "the sea.")—We are on board our own chartered vessel, which must go where we list, the captain and sailors being strictly bound to obey us. We sail under national colors, make our own laws for the time being, are ourselves the only censors over our speeches and conduct, and shall have no communication with the authorities on shore, unless our subjects rebel. Of this we have no fear, for we commenced by maintaining strict discipline, and as we make no unreasonable demands, are always cheerfully obeyed. Indeed, the most complete harmony exists between the rulers and the ruled, and though our government is the purest form of despotism, we flatter ourselves that it is better managed than that of the Model Republic.

Our territory, to be sure, is not very extensive. The Cleopatra is a dahabiyeh, seventy feet long by about ten broad. She has two short masts in front, upholding a lateen bow and stern. sail nearly seventy feet in length. The latter carries a small sail and the American colors. The narrow space around the foremast belongs to the crew, who cook their meals in a small brick furnace and sit on the gunwale beating a drum and tambourine and singing for hours in interminable choruses, when the wind blows fair. If there is no wind, half of them are on shore, tugging at the bow and stern, slowly along the banks with a long tow-rope, and moaning all day long: "Aya haman—aya haman!" If we strike on a sand-bank, they jump into the river and put their shoulders against the hull, singing: "hay-haylee sak!" If the current is slow, they ship the oars and pull us up stream, singing so complicated a refrain that it is impossible to write it with other than Arabic characters. There are eight men and a boy, besides our steersman, Hassan Abdasadeh, and the swarth pilot, who greets us every morning with a whole round of Arabic salutations.

Against an upright pole which occupies the place of a mainmast, stands our kitchen, a high wooden box, with three furnaces. Here our cook, Salame, may be seen at all times, with the cowl of a blue cupote drawn over his turban, preparing the marvellous dishes, wherein his delight is not less than ours. Salame, like a skillful artist as he is, husbands his resources, and each day astonishes us with new preparations, so that, out of few materials, he has attained the grand climax of all art—variety in unity. Achmet, my faithful dragoman, has his station here, and keeps one eye on the vessel and one on the kitchen, while between the two he does not relax his protecting care for us. The approach to the cabin is flanked by our provision-chests, which will also serve as breastwork in case of foreign aggression. A large filter of porous earthenware stands against the back of the kitchen, where we keep our fresh butter and vegetables in a box under it, where the sweet Nile-water strips cool and clear into an earthen basin. Our bread and vegetables, in an open basket of pale-blues, are suspended beside it, and the roof of the cabin supports our poultry-yard and pigeon-house. Sometimes (but not often) a leg of mutton may be seen hanging from the ridge-pole, which extends over the deck as a support to the awning.

The cabin, or mansion of the Executive Powers, is about twenty-five feet long. Its floor is 2 feet below the deck, and its ceiling five feet above, so that we are not cramped or crowded in any particular. Before the entrance, is a sort of portico, with a broad, cushioned seat on each side, and side-awnings to shut out the sun. This place is devoted to chibouks and meditation. We throw up the awnings, let the light pour in on all sides, and look out on the desert mountains while we inhale the incense of the East. Our main cabin is about ten feet long, and newly-painted of a brilliant blue color. A broad divan, with cushions, extends along each side, serving as a sofa by day, and a bed by night. There are both windows, blinds, and a canvas cover at the sides, so that we can regulate our light and air as we choose. In the middle of the cabin is our table and two camp-stools, and shawls, capotes, pistols, sabre and gun are suspended from the walls. A door at the further end opens into a wash-room, beyond which is a smaller cabin with beds, which we have allotted for Achmet's use. Our cook sleeps on deck, with his head against the provision-chest. The rais and pilot sleep on the roof of our cabin, where the latter sits all day, holding the long arm of the rudder, which projects forward over the cabin from the high end of the stern.

Our manner of life is simple and might even be called monotonous, but we have never found the greatest variety of landscape and incident so thoroughly enjoyable. The scenery of the Nile, thus far, scarcely changes from day to day, in its forms and colors, but only in their disposition with regard to each other. The shores are either palm-trees, fields of cane and dourra, young wheat, or patches of bare sand, blown out from the desert. The villages are all the same agglomerations of mud-walls, the oratories of the Moslem saints are the same white ovens, and every individual camel and buffalo resembles its neighbor in picturesque ugliness. The Arabian and Libyan Mountains now sweeping so far into the foreground that their yellow cliffs overhang the Nile, now receding into the violet haze of the horizon, exhibit little difference of height, line, or geological formation. Every new scene is the turn of a kaleidoscope, in which the same objects are grouped in other relations, yet always characterized by the most perfect harmony. These slight, yet ever-renewing changes, are to us a source of endless delight. Either from the pure atmosphere, the healthy life we lead, or the accordant tone of our spirits, we find ourselves unusually sensitive to all the slightest touches, the most minute rays of beauty and harmony which bathe every hour and page in deathless sunshine. The various groupings of the palms, the shifting of the blue evening shadows on the rose-hued mountain walls, the green of the wheat and sugar-cane, the windings of the great river, the alternations of wind and calm—each of these is enough to content us, and to give every day a different charm from that which went before. We meet contrary winds, sandbars and sand-banks without losing our patience, and even our excitement in the swiftness and grace with which our vessel sends before the north-wind is mingled with a regret that our journey is drawing so much the more swiftly to its close. A portion of the old Egyptian repose seems to be infused into our nature, and lately, when I saw my face in a mirror, I thought I saw in its features something of the patience and resignation of the Sphinx.

Although, in order to enjoy this life as much as possible, we subject ourselves to no arbitrary rules, there is sufficient regularity in our manner of living. We rise before the sun, and after breathing the cool morning air half an hour, drink a cup of coffee and go ashore for a walk, unless the wind is very strong in our favor. My friend, who is an enthusiastic sportsman and an admirable shot, takes his fowling-piece and my sketch book and pistols. We wander inland among the fields of wheat and dourra, course among the palms and acacias for game, or visit the villages of the Fellahs. The temperature, which is about 60° in the morning, rarely rises above 75° till afternoon, so that we have every day three or four hours' exercise in the mild and pure air. My friend always brings back from one to two dozen pigeons, while I, who practice with more pistol on such ignoble game as hawks and vultures, which are rarely lazy enough to shoot, can at best furnish a few wing feathers to clean our chibouks.

It is advisable to go armed on these excursions, though there is no danger of open hostility on the part of the people. Certain neighborhoods, as that of Beni Hassan, are in bad repute, but the depredations of the inhabitants, who have been disarmed by the government, are principally confined to thieving and other petty offenses. On one occasion I fell in with a company of these people, who demanded my tarboush, shoes and sash, and would have taken them had I not been armed.—In general, we have found the Fellahs very friendly and well disposed. They greet us on our morning walks with "Salamat" and "Sahat Khyr" and frequently accompany us for miles. My friend's fowling piece often brings around him all the men and boys of a village, who follow him as long as a pigeon is to be found on the palm-trees. The certainty of his shot excites their wonder.—"Wallah!" they cry; "every time the Howadji goes bim! the bird drops." The fact of my wearing a tarboush and white turban brings upon me much Arabic conversation, which is somewhat embarrassing, with my imperfect knowledge of the language; but a few words go a great way.—The first day I adopted this head-dress (which is convenient and agreeable in every respect,) the people saluted me with "good morning, O Sidi!" (Sir, or Lord) instead of the usual "good morning, O Howadji!" (i. e. merchant, as the Franks are rather contemptuously designated by the Arabs.) The addition of a Bedouin capote, which I sometimes wear in the evening, brings me the still higher title of Effendi."

For this climate and this way of life, the Egyptian costume is undoubtedly much better than the European. It is light, cool, and does not impede the motion of the limbs. The turban thoroughly protects the head against the sun and shades the eyes, while it obstructs the vision much less than a hat-brim. The broad silk shawl, which holds up the baggy trowsers, shields the abdomen against changes of temperature and tends to prevent diarrhea, which, beside opthalmia, is the only ailment the traveler need fear. The latter disease may be avoided by bathing the face in cold water after walking or any exercise which induces perspiration. I have followed this plan, and though my eyes are exposed daily to the full blaze of the sun, find them growing stronger and clearer. In fact, since leaving the invigorating camp-life of California, I have not felt the sensation of health so purely as now. The other day, to the great delight of our sailors and the inexpressible merriment of my friend, I tried one of Achmet's dresses. Though the short Theban's flowing trowsers and embroidered jacket gave me the appearance of a strapping Turk, who had grown too fast for his garments, they were so easy and convenient in every respect, that I am half tempted to un-Frank myself for the remainder of the journey.

But our day is not yet at an end. We come on board about 11 o'clock, and find our breakfast ready for the table. The dishes are few, but well-cooked, and just what a hungry man would desire—fowls, pigeons, eggs, rice, vegetables, fruit, the coarse but nourishing bread of the country, and the sweet water of the Nile. After breakfast we sent ourselves on the airy divans in front of the cabin, and quietly indulge in the luxury of a chibouk filled by Achmet's experienced hand, and a finjan of Turkish coffee. Then comes an hours exercise in Arabic, after which we read guide-books, consult our maps, write letters and occupy ourselves with various mysteries of our household, till the noonday heat is over. Dinner, which is served between four and five o'clock, is of the same materials as our breakfast, but differently arranged, and with the addition of soup. My friend avers that he no longer wonders why Esau sold his birthright, now that he has tasted our pottage of Egyptian lentils. Coffee and chibouks follow dinner, which is over with the first flush of sunset, and the first premonition of the coolness and quiet of evening.

We seat ourselves on deck and drink to its fullness the balm of this indescribable repose.—The sun goes down behind the Lybian Desert in a broad glory of purple and rosy lights; the Nile is calm and mirrorlike, the palms stand as if sculptured in jasper and malachite, and the torn and ragged sides of the Arabian Mountains, pouring through a hundred fissures the last of the plain, glow with a deep and crimson lustre, as if smouldering from some inward fire. The splendor soon passes off and they stand for some minutes in dead, ashy paleness. The sunset has now deepened into orange, in the midst of which a large planet shines whiter than the moon. A second glow falls upon the mountains, and this time of a pale, but intense yellow hue, which gives them the effect of a transparent painting. The palm-groves are dark below and the sky dark behind them: they alone, the symbols of perpetual desolation, are transfigured by the magical illumination. Scarcely a sound disturbs the solemn magnificence of the hour. Even our full-throated Arabs are silent, and if a wave gurgles against the prow, it slides softly back into the river, as if rebuked for the venture. We speak but little, and then mostly in echoes of each other's thoughts. "This is more than mere enjoyment of Nature," said my friend, on such an evening; it is Prayer."

Speaking of my friend, it is no more than just that I should confess how much of the luck of this Nile-voyage is owing to him, and therein may be the secret of my complete satisfaction and the secret of the disappointment of others. It is more easy and not more difficult for persons to harmonize while traveling, than when at home.—By this I mean that men of kindred natures and aims, and each other more readily and confide in each other more freely, while the least jarring element rapidly drives others further and further apart. No confessional so completely reveals the whole man as the companionship of travel. It is not possible to wear the conventional masks of society, and one repulsive feature is often enough to neutralize many really good qualities. On the other hand, a congeniality of soul and temperament speedily ripens into the firmest friendship and doubles every pleasure which is mutually enjoyed. My companion widely differs from me in age, in station and in his experience of life; but to one of those open, honest and loving natures which one often meets in his native Saxony, he unites a most warm and thorough appreciation of Beauty in Nature or Art. We harmonize to a miracle, and the parting with him at Assouan will be the sorest pang of my journey.

If I am not mistaken, my friend the Howadji par excellence, who took some Nile-notes, (the faithfulness of which I now entirely recognize,) in these regions two years ago says, that "Conscience lulls asleep on the Nile." If by this he means that artificial quality which bigots and sectarians call Conscience, I quite agree with him, and do not blame the Nile for its soporific powers. But that simple faculty of the soul, native to all men, which acts best when it acts unconsciously, and leads our passions and desires into right paths without seeming to lead them, is vastly strengthened by this quiet and healthy life. There is a cathedral like solemnity in the air of Egypt; one feels the presence of the altar, and is a better man without his will. To those rendered misanthropic by disappointed ambition—mistrustful by betrayed confidence—despairing by unassuageable sorrow—let me address the lines which head this letter.

I have endeavored to picture our mode of life as faithfully and minutely as possible, because it bears no resemblance to travel in any other part of the world. Into the heart of a barbarous continent and a barbarous land, we carry with us every desirable comfort and luxury. In no part of Europe or America could we be so thoroughly independent, without undergoing considerable privations, and wholly losing that sense of rest which is the greatest enjoyment of this journey. We are cut off from all communication with the great world of politics, merchandize and usury, and remember it only through the heart, not through the brain. We go ashore in the delicious mornings, breathe the elastic air and wander through the palm-groves, as happy and care-free as two Adams in a Paradise without Eves. It is an episode which will flow forward in the under-currents of our natures through the rest of our lives, soothing and refreshing whatever it rises to the surface. I do not reproach myself for this passive and sensuous existence. I give myself up to it unreservedly, and if some angular-souled utilitarian should come along and recommend me to shake off my laziness and learn the conjugations of Coptic verbs, or the hieroglyphs of Pthah and Thoth, I should not take the chibouk from my mouth to answer him. My friend sometimes laughingly addresses me with two lines of Hebel's quaint Allemanic poetry:

"Es sohch a Lebe, junges Blust,
Denk ich wohl for a Thierle gnat."

(such a life, young blood, best befits an animal,) but I tell him that the wisdom of the Black Forrest won't answer for the Nile. If any one persists in forcing the application, I prefer being called an animal to changing my present habits. A life so spent would be wretchedly aimless, but a few months are in truth "sore labor's bath" to every wrung heart and overworked brain.

I could say much more, but as you may suppose, it requires little effort to write three hours in a cabin, when the palms are rustling their tops outside, the larks singing in the meadows and the odor of acacia flowers breathing through the windows. To travel and write is like inhaling and exhaling one's breath at the same moment. You take in impressions at every pore of the mind, and the process is so pleasant that you sweat them out again most reluctantly. Lest I should overtake the reader with the disease, and make to day labor, which should be feast, allow me to close this letter. There is a donkey saddled on the bank, and I must ride to Siout once more, before we leave for Kemneh and Thebes.

WHIG NATIONAL CONVENTION IN CINCINNATI.—The Albany Evening Journal, says:

"We have received numerous letters of inquiry in regard to the time and place of the next Whig National Convention. We understand that the subject is under consideration at Washington. So far as this State is concerned, we have no doubt there would be a cheerful concurrence in the designation of the Queen City. The railroad facilities are such now that it would almost be as easy for the New England States to reach Cincinnati as Philadelphia or Baltimore?"

It is the wish of Ohio and the Whigs of the entire West, Southwest and Northwest, that the next Presidential Convention be held at Cincinnati. Let it be in the Queen City.—O. S Journal.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SENTINEL.

Madison, Feb. 12, '25.

The speech of Mr. F. J. Dunn last evening, upon illegal banking, turned out a little differently from the expectations of members, and from my own. He announced as his subject the early and later history of the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance Company, and held very closely to his text. The address was listened to with a good deal of interest, as might be expected, particularly under present circumstances. We have now had two speeches from the anti-bank southwest, the first by Moses M. Strong, who closed by sundry interesting suggestions to the effect that a system might be adopted on his plan, and be as safe as any other, and beneficial to the State—while the last made it a prominent argument in favor of the proceedings against the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance Company, that it stands and will stand in the way of the operation of a General Banking Law in our State. So turns the world around!

At the close of the address, the meeting organized for the purpose of returning thanks to Mr. Dunn, Ex-Lieut Gov. Beall in the chair. The Speaker, Mr. Shafter, in a neat address moved the thanks of the Assembly to the orator of the evening, and the vote was accordingly passed.

I am informed by Hon. M. L. Martin, the contractor on the Fox River Improvement, that some remarks of mine relative to a bill introduced, providing for a loan of $10,000 from the School Fund for the Improvement, are likely to injure his interests in embarrassing the negotiation of the scrip, by which he is proceeding with his work.—Not having my letter before me, I can only refer to the report of Dr. Peak as to the condition of the Improvement Fund, which I believe was the precise question to which I alluded in the letter referred to by Mr. Martin. The report reads as follows—it accompanied a bill of which I will speak hereafter:

"Your committee estimates that there is due and to become due on existing contracts, about the sum of two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, and that it will require an additional outlay of about $50,000 to complete the work at Fort Winnebago, and dredging the Fox river immediately below Fort Winnebago, and at Winnebago rapids at the outlet of lake Winnebago, making in the whole the sum of $325,000 necessary to complete the improvement. To meet this demand your committee are informed and believe there is yet remaining unsold of the grant made to said improvement, about 200,000 acres of land, which, if sold at the minimum price of government lands, will not bring sufficient to complete said improvement by the sum of $75,000, leaving the improvement or the State indebted to that amount."

The bill accompanying the report provides—1st; for bringing into market immediately the 200,000 acres of land granted by Congress at a minimum of $2,50 per acre—2nd: for the subdivision of valuable hydraulic lands, and appraisal thereof—and 3d: pledges the money arising from the sale, to the amount of $200,000, to the payment of principal and interest of the scrip issued to Mr. Martin, and also pledges the tolls for the same purpose.

The condition of the fund, the lands yet unselected and unsold, the proposals of the committee—are above stated, and our readers can judge of the propriety of loaning the $10,000 from the school fund, and of the propriety of passing the bill reported by the Committee. One feature in the first line of the bill is peculiar. It commences thus—"For the purpose of meeting all liabilities incurred by the State," &c. It is remarkable, taken in connection with the opinion recently sent in by the Attorney General, that the State does not incur any liability with reference to the scrip referred to.

But there is another consideration connected with the question, which ought to be looked at. The bill provides for the sale "without delay" of the 200,000 acres of land remaining of the grant by Congress. After some examination of this matter, I have been led to believe that the sales of these lands thus far have been made contrary to law, and that the immediate sale proposed by the Committee's bill would be also contrary to law. The act of Congress making the grant of lands for the improvement, made that grant on a certain, well-defined condition, viz: that lands should be sold to the amount of $20,000, and then sales should cease till $10,000 has been expended in the work, when lands enough may be sold sufficient to re-imburse the expenditure, and so on——the evident intention being that the work should be done with cash, and the State incur no "liability." By an act, approved June 29th, 1848, the State accepted the trust with all its conditions.

The question, then, is certainly worthy of consideration whether this law has been obeyed, and this trust executed, in accordance with the provisions of both. I do not doubt that the proposals of the select Committee on the Improvement will be carefully considered. It is highly desirable that this very important work should be completed as rapidly as possible; but it is certain that it should progress according to law, and not otherwise.

A remarkable petition, having "an ancient fish-like smell," was read this morning, from persons styling themselves the Muskego Lake Fishing Club, protesting against the passage of the Maine Liquor law, inasmuch as the increased consumption of water caused by such an enactment, would have a tendency to drain the smaller lakes, and prejudice their interests. During the pendency of the same order of business, a letter was read, addressed to Mr. Clemons, of Grant Co, by sundry ladies, enclosing a petition for a prohibitory liquor law, and expecting him and other members to do their duty in the matter. Mr. McKee moved to refer the letter to the committee on Privileges and Elections. Mr. Graham, the chairman of that committee, arose, blushing celestial rosy red, and gently insinuated a hope that it would not be referred to his committee. His modest plea was irresistible, and the letter took the usual reference to the select committee.

Mr. Powers' memorial to Congress, prays for the passage of the appropriations for harbor improvements provided for by Gov. Doty's bill, now before that body.

The bill to pay the balance of Mr. Sholes' account against the state will probably be made the special order for some day not far distant. He informs me that the Supreme Court decided in favor of the constitutionality of his contract. My impression was otherwise when I before referred to the subject.

A strong lobby delegation is here to push thro' a bill, chartering a Railroad Company from Waukesha to Elgin, and its friends are enthusiastic in their calculations. Supposing such a road to be built, and viewing it with especial reference to the interests of Milwaukee, it is probable that it would aid in bringing to the markets of our city, with greater facility, the large quantity of grain and pork, which even now comes thither from McHenry and Stephenson counties in Illinois, as a better market than Chicago. Beyond such considerations, I see no objections to granting charters to all, or any kinds of roads asked for, so long as no private rights or granted privileges are infringed upon, and no charter granted which may not be repealed whenever they have been obtained with fraudulent intent, or are held by companies who will not build as obstacles in the way of those who will. Or rather, I would say, let us have general Railroad, Plank Road, and other laws, under the provisions of which our citizens can associate themselves and build such roads as they are able to build. The theory of our State government is—"No special legislation"—while its practice is nothing else. W. H. W.

Veto of the Valley R. R. Bill.

MADISON, Feb. 13.

The Governor sent into the Senate this morning a veto of the act amending the charter of the R. R. U. V. R. R. Co. It is too long to copy in full but I send you the following synopsis of it, containing all the grounds of objection:

The Constitution, Sec. 18, Art. 4, provides that no private or local bill shall embrace more than one subject, and that one shall be expressed by its title. This act embraces more than one subject. It provides for amendments to present charter, with respect to a railroad between certain points named in said charter by former enactments. This is one subject. In its 23d section, it provides for an extension from its point of intersection with the Wisconsin River to La Crosse, Willow River, and Beaver Dam thus giving power to construct other roads different and widely distant from the local limits mentioned in the original charter. This is another subject.

The constitution, Sec. 13, Art. 1st, provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation. The 1st section of this act provides that the compensation for lands taken by this road shall be ascertained by Commissioners, who shall deduct the benefits accruing to the owner from the damages assessed. The Supreme Court has decided against such deduction of benefits.

The United States Constitution, 2nd part of Sec. 10, Art. 1st, provides that laws should not be passed impairing the obligation of contracts.—In the case of Dartmouth College vs. Woodward, the U. S. Supreme Court, held that charters could not be altered or repealed after its acceptance by the corporators without their consent. The act incorporating the Madison and Beloit Railroad Company in 1848 did not reserve to the Legislature any right to alter or repeal, and none of the acts amendatory that charter reserve such a right.—Hence this Legislature has not the Constitutional power to pass a law altering that charter, without the consent of the original corporators.

This act purports to be amendatory of the charter of the Rock River Union Valley R. R. Co. No company by that name has ever been chartered. The act of Aug. 19th, '48 incorporated the Madison and Beloit R. R. Co, The act of Feb. 4th, 1850 changes the points of termination of the road altogether. The act of Feb. 9th 1850 authorizes said company to build a road from Janesville to Lake Winnebago, in entirely a different direction from any road previously chartered, and provides that it may be known as the R. R. U. V. R. R. Co, after the Directors shall have assented it. The last act does not incorporate any company by that name, or grant any franchises to any company by that name; and such powers cannot be assumed by implication. It is submitted whether a mere change of name can make a corporation.

This act provides generally that the company may take a width of 130 feet of land for its track; it had before only power to take 100 feet. This act re-incorporates the Co. power to take an additional 30 feet along its present located line, as well as the proposed extention.

This act grants extraordinary powers, and is against public policy. Looking over the powers granted from the beginning to the Madison and Beloit R. R. Co., and those since granted and now proposed, there are the following, viz: from Beloit to Janesville and Madison—from south line of the State to the Wisconsin river—from Janesville to Lake Winnebago—from Lake Winnebago to Lake Superior—from the Wisconsin river to La Crosse and Willow river, and from the same river to Beaver Dam, an aggregate of 1000 miles or more.

The amount of powers given and proposed is disproportionate to the authorized capital—$4,000,000. This act provides for no increase of capital, while it provides for an extension which would cost a sum equal to the whole capital stock, leaving no capital at all to complete roads authorized by the present charter.

I have but little space to say anything further, but I hazard the assertion that the animum gathering thus objected to by the Governor, cannot be passed over his head.

The bill appropriating $5000 annually to the State and County Agricultural Societies for 4 years, occupied the whole afternoon, and was passed by a close vote in a thin house. I will refer to the debate on the bill in my next.

W. H. W.

EXEMPTION.

In debate upon the exemption of certain property from execution, in the Assembly yesterday, Mr. Tory, from Iowa, stated the Homestead Exemption law had operated very much to the detriment of the poor men of his section, depriving them of the credit which they before had. We should like to know upon what principle this difference was made. * * * * Integrity, and not property, is the proper basis of credit and will command credit when property will not.—Madison Democrat, 13th. inst.

Mr. Tory, we do not doubt, stated an incontrovertible fact when he declared, that the Homestead Exemption law had operated injuriously upon the poor men in the Western part of our State. Our own belief is, that the law has been a detriment to the whole State, and that no small share of the pressure in the money market, from which business of all sorts has suffered so seriously during the past six months, is directly attributable to unwise and unstable legislation on this and kindred subjects. Humanity, indeed, pleads strongly in favor of such a law, and many considerations of public policy sustain it: but its practical effect, so far as our observation has extended is to impair, if not destroy credit, and thus to deprive the poor man of his only capital. It may be true, as the Madison Democrat says that "integrity, and not property, is the proper basis of credit;" for the honest man will devote his last penny to paying his just debts, while the dishonest will, if he can, avoid payment, even tho' possessed of abundant means. Integrity will go a great ways in securing credit, where the parties are known. We have men in our city, whose "word is as good as their bond," and who can command credit, for this very reason, when others of ampler means, but less approved character, would ask in vain.

But take the case of the Farmer, coming in to borrow from some of our money lenders, who know nothing about him personally. He may, or may not be the most honest man alive. They dont know the fact, and his "integrity," therefore, tho' unquestioned among his friends and acquaintances, is of comparatively little account with strangers. On the other hand, his "property" speaks for itself. The money-lender knows its value, and because it is known it "commands credit," where "integrity" would go away empty-handed.

So of the many application from Business Men Farmers, Rail Road and Plank Road Companies in this State, to Eastern Capitalists for loans of money. These Capitalists are very imperfectly acquainted with our State and People. They have a natural dread of allowing their money to go a great ways from them. They prefer investment, at moderate rates of interest, near home, to those at higher rates, abroad, unless the security offered is undoubted. "Integrity" will go but a very little ways in making up the requisite security, for the Capitalist is indifferently posted up as to the fact. But "property," whether in the shape of improved Farms, running mills, large stores, and warehouses, or Railroad or Plank Road bonds, offers a tangible proposition upon which the money-lender can decide at once. Here again "property commands the credit which "integrity" solicits in vain. It is all very well to say that "integrity" is the only proper basis of credit. When the poor man, however, comes to ask a loan, he has no time to prove up his "integrity," nor the money-lender any disposition to listen to him, if he could. But his Farm is a "fixed fact,"—its value is readily ascertained, and the loan wanted would be promptly forthcoming but for the Exemption law. That stands, like a lion in the way, and however well-intended, its practical operation, thus far, has been anything but a benefit to the poor man.

SPURIOUS TESTIMONY.—The Sentinel pretends that resolutions were passed by the Irish delegation to President Fillmore, justifying his refusal to accede to their request, and approving of the cold blooded formality of their reception.—Commercial.

The Sentinel "pretended" nothing of the sort. We published the resolutions, which, of course, the Commercial suppresses, as an all-sufficient answer to that print's reckless misrepresentations about the President. Unable to gainsay this testimony, the Commercial pronounces it "spurious." So, no doubt, it thinks the card of THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE, who headed the Irish Delegation, and bears witness to the President's courtesy and kindness, and the letter of Mr. KEOGAN, published in our paper of yesterday, showing up the heartless demagogueism of the Commercial and its sort, and warning them with peculiar significance that the day has gone by when Irishmen can be caught by such chaff.

IN CHRCUIT COURT, Feb. 14, 1852—Levi Blossom vs. the City of Milwaukee.—Motion to dissolve the Injunction, argued and submitted.—WATKINS for complainant, F. RANDALL, for Defendant.

Court adjourned till Monday at 9 A. M.

Mass Meeting in the Second Ward.

Pursuant to a call, the citizens of the 2nd Ward assembled in Mr. Bertshy's Hall, to give public expression to their outraged feelings, with regard to the unheard-of intrigues of the followers of the Temperance Humbug, and to show by a manly demonstration, the true wishes of a large majority of the citizens of the said Ward.

The meeting, unusually large and consisting of our most respectable citizens, was organized by appointing Mr. K. Schloemilch, Chairman, and Mr. T. Knehn, Secretary.

The subject having been discussed, a Committee of five were appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting. Those appointed were Messrs. Lauvenz, J. Nenstadti, H Haertel, J. Laubenheimer and J. B. Schuman.

Mr. A. Roesler then gave a view of the obnoxious Maine Liquor Law, and showed the disastrous consequence which would follow the enactment of the same.

The Committee thereupon returned and reported the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, For the last three or four years continuous efforts have been made, on the part of some organized temperance associations, to enforce by law a total abstinence from intoxicating liquors upon the people of this State;

And Whereas, In the opinion of this meeting, composed of citizens, making a part of the people of Wisconsin, the passage of the Maine Liquor Law, petitioned for by temperance men at the present session of the Legislature, would be fraught with imminent danger to our individual liberty, to the independence of our family homes and to the best interests of our State;

All resolutions were unanimously adopted and it was further—

Resolved, That a copy thereof be transmitted to the Representatives of our City and County at Madison.

Also, on motion of Mr. Haertel—

Resolved, That a large Committee of citizens of the Second Ward, called the "Iron Ward," be appointed and instructed to go from street to street, and from house to house, and use all honorable means in procuring numerous signatures against the projected Temperance Law, and to transmit the same to our Representatives at Madison.

Messrs. Will, Rupp, Borngesser, Lsubenheimer, Steinbeiss, Luck, Bruche, Neustadte, Roetke, Schloemilch, Eskstein, Uplensperger, T. Best, and Bobzien, offered their services for the above purpose, and divided themselves into seven districts.

On motion of Mr. Roessler, it was resolved to circulate the following petitions amongst the ladies of Milwaukee:

To the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin:—

The undersigned, wives of citizens and inhabitants of the city of Milwaukee, represent to your honorable body—

As we have heard, that there are now numerous petitions before you, asking for a law prohibiting all wines, beers, and liquors, as a beverage, we feel it our duty to declare, that it is with great pleasure that we see our husbands, after a good day's work, refresh themselves with a good glass of wine, or something similar; and, that, in our opinion, neither the laws of Nature, nor those of the Bible, nor those of common sense, are opposed to it; and that we agree perfectly with Dr. Martin Luther, that he—

Who loves not wine, woman, and song,
Remains a fool, his whole life long.

Therefore, for the sake of the legal rights of our husbands, and the happiness of their homes, we protest respectfully against the proposed law, and particularly against the adoption of a law like that now in force in Maine.

Finally—

Resolved, That the English and German papers in the City be requested to publish these proceedings.

And the meeting then adjourned.

F. SCHLŒMILCH, Ch'n.

J. KUEHN, Sec'y.

And Whereas, This meeting consider it their perfect right to speak openly and freely their opinion on all public questions, touching them as part of the people of Wisconsin, and to enlist all lawful and peaceable means to ward off measures, aimed against their common interests in the welfare of this City and this State; Therefore

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this meeting, not the use of intoxicating drinks, as such, but the immoderate use of the same is pernicious to the individual and to the whole; that in general every immoderate use of the earthly enjoyments produces pernicious effects, and that it would be very unreasonable, therefore, to prohibit the use of every enjoyment by law. On the same ground the use of victuals ought to be prohibited, because an immoderate use of the same could produce an inflammatory disease of the bowels, and even death. Also, the use of coffee, ice creams, the chewing of tobacco, etc.

Resolved, That the assertion of private associations, according to which the cause of total abstinence being a moral object, should therefore be disseminated and inculcated by law, as the Republicans, as part of the self-governing people, is no sufficient reason, why we should be helped to it by the road of the law and the jail. The history of the world has taught us that laws always failed to make a people morally better, but at the utmost could make hypocrites, and sly drinkers, as this not seldom occurs even with prominent and zealous temperance men. To protest the more so against such a way of introducing moral reforms; because, once made a precedent, a wide door would be opened to a legislative enforcement of all such measures, as some private associations would pronounce as promoting a great and desirable public good, and because with the same reason church-going or the abstinence from the use of some other article could be enjoined upon us at the bid of the constable. Public discussion and instruction seem to us the best means towards carrying such a moral reform, and most suitable to a free people. Whoever should consider this way insufficient and take refuge in legislative enforcement, would, in our opinion set himself up as guardian of the sovereign people and show a gross ignorance and unacquaintance with the republican spirit of the institutions of our country.

Resolved, That the condemnation of the use of intoxicating drinks on religious grounds, is as futile as all the others; because, the founder of the Christian religion not only partook with his disciples and friends in the use of wine as a beverage, but even instituted the use of wine as part the holy sacrament, with the words:—"This do in remembrance of me"—which he certainly would not have done, if he was of the opinion of some modern Christians, who are pleased to call intoxicating drinks, the "drinks of hell."

Resolved, That we truly believe, and, from the intrigues and humbug, practiced by Temperance men, in order to get signatures to their petitions to the Maine Liquor Law, are fully convinced, that the majority of the people are opposed to the passage of such a law, and that, if submitted to the people, it would be voted down by a large majority.

Resolved, That we consider the Maine Liquor Law as arbitrary in the extreme, abolishing the trial of jury, punishing appeals to higher courts, introducing the monarchical system of search, as flourishing in the old country, and holding out an inducement to accusers, spies and other vagabonds, at the expense of useful production.

Resolved, That, in our opinion, the good name of our State has sunk so already enough by the enactment of former prohibitory laws, and to the best advantage against foreign immigration to our shores by our rival sister States, and that we should at least be spared this last death blow. For immigrants, tired of Europe and longing for the blessings of individual liberty and the independence of the family circle, would not fail to give a preference to that State or country whose government governs the least, and is free from "blue Legislation."

Resolved, That we solemnly protest against the calumnies thrown out against the good name of our citizens at a small Temperance Meeting held lately at the "Free Congregational Church," whenever it was stated that Milwaukee would oppose every such law. They did so apparently with a view of setting the City against the whole State, and inducing the representatives of the country to vote for such a law. We condemn this impudent step, stigmatising our city abroad as a law-defying unruly community, as entirely false.

☞ The Sheboygan Lake Journal makes the following charge against the Legislature, now in session at Madison:

Most of the time of the Legislature has been employed in preferring foolish charges against the State Officers, Supreme bench, attending the Theatre, and drinking whiskey.

It is quite unnecessary to contradict such merely malicious fabrications. It is the unanimous testimony of all who have visited Madison, during the session, that the Legislature has been earnestly and steadily at work, in the discharge of its duties, and that a more orderly, temperate and well-conducted body was never assembled at the Capital.

BLIND OF ONE EYE.—We suggest to our faultfinding contemporaries of the Commercial, and the Sheboygan Lake Journal &c, which have so much to say about the little amount of Legislation accomplished at Madison, that they turn their artillery, for a while, upon our "Democratic" Congress at Washington, which has been in session between two and three months, and as yet has done nothing at all.

THE MUSICAL FESTIVAL TO-NIGHT.—We again remind our readers that the Musical Festival, in aid of the two Musical Societies of our City, comes off at Young's Hall this evening. The Concert itself, we do not hesitate to say, will be quite as well worth hearing as any ever given in the West In three of the choruses, the entire strength of both Societies, numbering some two hundred vocal and instrumental performers, will be enlisted; Mr. ISLEY leading the chorus, Dr. FESSEL the orchestra, and

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1852.

AS the season for emigration approaches, we beg to acquaint our friends and the public with our Arrangements for the year 1852, and would inform them that with an increase of business—for which we are grateful—we are placed in possession of greater facilities for conducting the Emigrant and Foreign Exchange Business than any other House in the World, and for which—in a great measure—we have to thank a discerning public for their continued patronage.

Since the commencement of last year a large number of magnificent ships have been added to the various popular lines for which we are the Agents, and several others are now in course of construction, all of which will be fitted up for passengers in the most superior manner, and commanded by men of long experience.

By the following List of Packets, and their dates of sailing—being six regular packets a month to and from Liverpool—four, to and from London—and two, to and from Glasgow—persons coming for their friends, or those proceeding to the "Old Country," will perceive it much to their advantage to make arrangements at our office; and as heretofore, our branches in Liverpool will be under the personal superintendence of our Mr. W. TAPSCOTT—whose well known care and attention to passengers embarking by our line, is a sufficient guarantee for him his present high reputation among the emigrating public.

Milwaukee, July 1 1851.

Troy Fire Insurance Company,
TROY, WALWORTH COUNTY, WIS.

CAPITAL $100,000.

The Directors feel grateful to the public for having thus early manifested their approval of and confidence in this Company. After having been in operation ten months, we are able to report as follows:

Whole number of Policies issued,	969
Whole amount of Property insured,	$625,851 00
Whole amount of Cash premium rec'd,	8314 57
Whole amount of losses allowed and paid,	371 27
Balance of Cash Premium on hand,	4243 10

IT is gratifying to the Directors to state to the members of this Company, that the business has more than met their expectations, and is rapidly increasing. This unparalleled success in the commencement, and increasing of business, show that our plan and management meets with the approval of the public.

The Charter and By-Laws are free from objections, and provide that the risks shall be divided into two distinct departments, and the premium notes in one shall not be liable for losses in the other. The only risks taken in the Farmer's Department are on farm property, detached dwellings, country churches, school houses, tailors' shoemakers', and cabinet shops. No hazardous risks will be taken in either department, nor more than $2000 in one risk, or in a circle of eight rods.

The company possess both the advantages of the Stock and Mutual plan. Any person insuring may pay once and one-half the regular cash premium in full, without a premium note. Notes may be added or changed, out-buildings erected, if fifty feet from dwelling, and such additions and repairs made as do not increase the hazard, without notifying the company. The Company will be responsible for the correctness of surveys made by their agents. Insurance may take effect on the day the application is made. The Company pays, in case fire, the full amount of damage not exceeding the amount insured, and all matters of difference may be settled by arbitration in the county where the loss occurs.

The rates charged by this company, though low, are based upon the actual results of insuring for the past twenty years, and are found to be sufficient, with prudent management, to pay all losses without ever resorting to the premium notes; thus the rates are as low as for dwellings and farm property, are a premium not of one per cent, and a cash premium of fifty cents on each $100 per year.

In publishing our safe, cheap, and popular plan of Insurance, we deem it a duty to ourselves and the public to state a few existing facts with the Washington and Montgomery Co.—

The Washington County Mutual commenced in 1836, by collecting thirty cents on $100; in 1838 they first discovered that this was insufficient to pay losses, and raised to 33 cents, and now are collecting 50 cents on each $100; the result of which is, by their report, Jan. 1, 1850, $2000 in the treasury, and $1,200 on which they will pay, leaving but one hundred thousand, making their actual debt 101 thousand.

The Montgomery County Mutual is another example of bad management. They have been in operation a little longer than the Washington, and their report shows what the Washington is fast coming to. They reported to the Comptroller, Jan. 1, 1850, that their losses and cash expenses had exceeded their cash receipts twenty-nine thousand dollars, and fifteen thousand dollars claims unsettled, making debts and claims forty-four thousand dollars, and some thirty millions at risk, on which they will probably lose ninety thousand dollars more, making their actual debt one hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars.

The cash premiums now collected in those two companies on what they insure in future will only pay losses on the carry, consequently those insuring with them now not only pay for the present, but assume a portion of the enormous debts, which must be raised by tax. These companies are unpopular in New York, and are compelled to vacate. The Village of the Hassington, where they are not so well known for business. Arch Bishop and Lester Wilcox may publish, as heretofore, their firm belief that no tax will ever be necessary, but the figures are the things to judge from.

Since the above reports, the Montgomery have tried a tax on their premium notes.

Now we would ask the public candidly, which of these three companies it is to their interest to insure in; the Washington, and assume a debt of $101,000, the Montgomery, and assume a debt of $134,000, or of the Troy, with an increasing cash fund sufficient to pay all losses and expenses without ever resorting to a tax?

STATE FAIR.

CRANE'S PATENT SOAP took the FIRST PREMIUM at the STATE FAIR at Janesville! also at the State Fair of the State of New York, and at the First Fair of the American Institute. Or contrast it not, because it is the BEST Soap in use. If any are still skeptical, let them read the following—the names to which might be indefinitely extended—and then try it for themselves, and if it don't succeed, they don't follow the directions:—

We have used CRANE'S PATENT SOAP in our families for the past eight months, and pronounce it FULLY EQUAL to its recommendations. We do not discover that it injures clothing in the least. It is the cheapest soap in use. We should not willingly do without it.

CAN now be obtained in this city of S. JOHNSON, Jr., and H. Bosworth & Sons, and of one or more Druggists or Merchants in most of the cities or villages of the West!
